VOL. XXIII. MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE, MIDDLEBURY, VT., FEBRUARY 9, 1927 No. 16

$100,000 ADDITION TO STARR LIBRARY

U. V. M. VANQUISHED BY BLUE SEXTET IN HARD CONTEST

Offensive and Defensive Co-ordination Overcome Vermont.

CATAMOUNT LOSES BY A 5 TO 1 SCORE

First Leg of Championship Of State Decisively Secured.

The Blue sextet settled firmly on its first victim in the race for state championship of hockey when it met and humbled the Vermont Catamount at Burlington, Wednesday, February 2, by a 5 to 1 score. Middlebury took the first goal, Vermont tied in the last of the opening period, Middlebury went ahead with another goal in the second period, and then, to wind things up with a grand flourish, zipped three tallies in one after another as the final minutes of play came along.

A powerful offensive that swept the Green and Gold men down the ice, and a sextet that worked as one man, gave the Panther the overwhelming decision. Vermont fought gamely throughout, but a weakness in passing and teamwork gave them an offensive that was ineffectual against Middlebury's line, and rarely was the blue and white goal in danger.

With a little over half the first period completed, "Hal" Whittemore sped down the ice in company with "Red" Hill, and ending a pretty bit of teamwork, hoisted the puck by Vermont's goalie. Bassow, Vermont's freshman center, tied the count after a bit of clever skating alone down the ice. But "Still" Kelley dashed the Catamount hopes directly afterward with a well timed and high shot from the side which lifted well into the upper corner of the net.

Vermont was growing skeptical of Middlebury's tactics, and calling that the Panther was stalling, as the last period drew on toward a close. Then Capt. Simmons' men let loose their full offense and the fireworks began. In a whirlwind of flashy passwork and speedy skating, Kelley, Whittemore, and Simmons in turn sent the puck through goalie Perry and Wood. Only clever guarding by Wood saved the Vermonters from a far worse drubbing.

WESTON WINS GOLF MEDAL.

Henry M. Weston '29, College Golf champion, was presented a medal designating, his championship Tuesday morning in chapel.

Weston has held the title for two consecutive years. He is also active in winter sports, having won several places in meets last winter. He is a member of D. K. E. fraternity.

GLEE CLUB GIVES CONCERT TONIGHT

After a week of daily practice for the premier concert, the Middlebury Glee Club will make its seasonal debut tonight at Fair Haven, Vermont.

Under the combined direction of Professor Alfred Larson and Harry G. Owen, one of the best programs ever prepared at Middlebury will be given. Although the Club has not reached its best form as yet, a finished concert is expected tonight, after which there will be rigid training for the intercollegiate contest February twenty-fourth at Boston.

WINTER CARNIVAL COMES ON FEB. 22

Sages Will Award Cup To Winners on Three Year Basis.

Plans for the Annual Winter Carnival of the college to be held on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22, are already well under way according to news released by the Physical Education Department today. The date this year coincides with that of the Basketball game with St. Stephen's so that a full day and evening of sport is promised for the holiday. The events comprising the Inter-Fraternity Carnival together with full rules and regulations are printed below. The snow shoe and ski events, except for the cross country ski will be held in the morning and the skating events the most part of the afternoon before the Hockey Game. A cup will be given by the Sages to the winning group in the carnival, the cup to be awarded on a three year basis.

The events, points, entries, etc., are as follows:

Skating—4 lap relay, 4 men, 2 heats, 2 qualify each heat, points, 5, 3, 1; 1 lap dash, 1 man, 2 heats, 3 qualify each heat, points, 5, 3, 1; 4 lap dash, 1 man, 2 heats, 3 qualify each heat, points, 5, 3, 1.

Skiing—100 yard dash, 2 men, 3 heats, 2 qualify each heat, points, 5, 3, 1; 100 yard obstacle, 2 men, 3 heats, 2 qualify each heat, points, 5, 3, 1; 1 mile Cross Country, 2 men, points, 5, 3, 1.

Snowshoeing—100 yard dash, 2 men, 3 heats, 2 qualify each heat, points, 5, 3, 1; 100 yard obstacle, 2 men, 3 heats, 2 qualify each heat, points, 5, 3, 1.

Hockey—Exhibition Hockey Game by Varsity Squad.

The rules and regulations governing the Carnival as drawn up by the Physical Education Department are:

1. Points awarded as follows in Intra-mural standing: For entry 25 points, 1st 50, 2nd 40, 3rd 30, 4th 20.

2. Groups must enter full quota allowed and must compete in each event to receive credit for entry points.

3. In obstace races, barrels, horses and rope are used.

4. All pledges and members of fraternities are eligible; non-fraternity men are eligible for neutral body.

5. All entries must be filed at the Athletic Director's office by Saturday, Feb. 19.

BLUE AND WHITE DEFEAT NORWICH TEAM AT RUTLAND

MAROON BEATEN BY A 4-POINT MARGIN

Franzoni Stars For Home Team and Is High Point Man.

Displaying some of the best basketball of the season, the Black Panther took the first game of the Middlebury-Vermont-Norwich state series and the first game of collegiate basketball ever played in Rutland by defeating Norwich University, 26 to 22, at the Armory Saturday night. The game was Middlebury's home contest, played in Rutland through arrangement with the Rutland Exchange Ski Club as a feature of the winter carnival, and Middlebury and Norwich rooters made up a large part of the audience of 800 that watched the hard-fought battle.

Norwich, being the visiting team, had the choice of goals. Humeston drew first blood, scoring from easy range after accurate passing on the part of the Blue teammates had worked the ball past the Norwich guards. Bedell countered.

Neither team gained any advantage in the first half, the score being tied at the close, 8 to 8. Both fives played careful, consistent basketball, making their passes good, and waiting for an opening in the others' defense.

The break came early in the second period, Middlebury going into a two-point lead that their opponents failed to make up. Ray Franzoni, going in at forward for Middlebury, lived up to his reputation. After a few shots that bounced out of the basket, he found the range, and sank four field goals, the last two giving his team the four-point lead that won the game.

"Al" Molter, playing the tap-off position for Norwich while Bedell was shifted to a forward berth, deserved credit for the hard work he did. Hourin, substituting in the last half, garnered three of the Maroon's goals.

Made Possible by the Donation of Alumnus

BANQUET GIVEN BY ALUMNI AT RUTLAND

Approximately one hundred alumni and alumnae of Middlebury College attended the banquet given at the Berwick Hotel, in Rutland, Saturday evening preceeding the Norwich game.

Mr. Homer Skeels '98 of Ludlow, President of the Middlebury District, presided at the dinner and short speeches were made by President Paul D. Moody, "Casey" Jones '15, Dean E. J. Wiley '13 and Coach A. M. Brown, Director of Athletics.

The College quartette consisting of Messrs. Furbush, Crane, Penn and McCutcheon accompanied by Mrs. E. J. Wiley '12, did much to make the program a success. Cheers for the speakers led by Crane '27 and for the basketball team who were present at the dinner, further enlivened the occasion.

FRESHMAN CLASS PRODUCE "KEMPY"

Sparkling Comedy in Three Acts To Be Coached by Miss Graham.

"Kempy", a three act comedy of American life written by Elliot and J. C. Nugent with Arthur Pierce of Burlington, Vermont, in the title role, has been chosen for the annual production of the Freshman class.

This sparkling and witty comedy was first presented at the Belmont Theatre New York City, where it met with instant success. Its underlying current of humor has never since failed to win an audience.

The play brings together a curious group of town folk, among whom is the flighty young daughter who marries the plumber and thus starts the action of the play.

Middlebury To Debate On Volstead Question

Resolved that the Volstead Act be amended to permit the manufacture and sale of light wine and beers, is to be the subject of the first debate of the year to take place next Tuesday, February 15, in Mead Memorial Chapel, with Marquette as an opponent.

Samuel W. Pattee '29 and Edward F. Landon '29 with Scott A. Babcock as alternate will take the stand for Middlebury. The decision will be made by a vote of the audience.

Trustees Duplicate Gift by Appropriation of $50,000.

DR. J. W. ABERNETHY BEQUEATHS LIBRARY

Completed Building to Have Frontage of 172 Feet.

The addition of two wings to the Egbert Starr Library, the cost of which will involve a sum in the neighborhood of $100,000, has been assured Middlebury College by action taken at the annual mid-winter meeting of the Board of Trustees of the college held in New York January 28.

According to information made available at the office of President Paul D. Moody the sum of $50,000 has been appropriated by the trustees for the erection of one of the wings. This action makes available another $50,000 offered by Dr. M. Allen Starr of New York, a trustee, which will be used in the erection of another wing on the opposite side of the building. This provisional gift was made by Dr. Starr in October of 1924 with the proviso that the college appropriate a like sum.

His offer followed the bequest in August, 1923, of the private library of Dr. Julian W. Abernethy of Burlington, a former trustee. According to the will of Dr. Abernethy his library is to be kept perpetually separate and distinct. One of the new wings of the building is to provide suitable housing facilities for this valuable collection.

It is expected that the contracts will be open for bids before the first of March and that work will begin during the latter part of April. It is not believed that the new portions of the library will be ready for use before January 1, 1928. During the construction the library will continue in use as at present under the direction of the librarian, Miss Laila A. McNeil.

According to specifications in the office of J. J. Fritz, business manager of the college, each of the new wings will have a frontage of 47 feet and will be 50 feet in depth. This will give the completed building a frontage of 172 feet, or 30 feet more than double the present frontage.

The exterior will be of the same material as the present building which contains six kinds of Vermont marble. The rear of both wings will be in stucco to allow the addition of stack rooms in the future. The decorative and furnishing scheme in the interior will be the same as employed in the present building.

The east wing, which is to be known as the Abernethy wing, will consist of one floor, a basement and probably later a balcony. In the basement there may be a faculty reading room and a seminar room. The main floor of the wing will be employed as a reading room and will contain private alcoves for quiet study. The Abernethy collection will be housed in this wing.

The west wing, to be called the Starr wing, will have reading rooms on both floors. Shelves along the walls will contain books for reference.

The Abernethy collection, which consists of about 5000 volumes will be of special interest to students of American literature. Dr. Abernethy was a professor of literature and author of several volumes on American and English literature. The gathering of his library was the work of a

THE GREATER LIBRARY.

This spring will see the start of active work upon the newest addition to the Middlebury plant—the greater Starr Library. Fortunate indeed is Middlebury College in thus being able to add to her equipment such a valuable literary collection as the Dr. Julius Willis Abernethy Library of American Literature.

Ever since the bequest of Dr. Abernethy four years ago this coming summer, those most deeply interested in Middlebury's intellectual progress have awaited with impatience the time when circumstances would permit the housing of the Abernethy Library in a suitable surroundings, available for undergraduate use. They now note with joy the successful completion of the preliminary steps and the definite assurance of immediate construction.

To the memory of Dr. Abernethy, the donor of the collection; to Dr. Allen M. Starr who provided the money for one of the new wings to the building, and to the Trustees for their recent appropriation which makes possible the complete fulfillment of the plan, the deepest appreciation is due on the part of the Alumni the friends of the student body of the college.

Middlebury, as a small college, has been the recipient of an unusual number of valuable gifts within the past two decades—and none more valuable or more acceptable in the highest sense than the present addition to what is the true heart of any educational institution—the library.

FELLOWSHIP APPLICANTS.

Very wisely indeed the decision has been made (with the consent of Hon. Redfield Proctor, the donor) to advance the time of awarding the Dutton Fellowships from Commencement Week to a time earlier in the spring. As explained elsewhere this is done in order that candidates for the honor may not rest in uncertainty as to future plans right up to the close of the academic year.

The history of these fellowships is already familiar and is given in resume in this issue with full details as to application for the award. The importance of gifts of such magnitude to the graduates of Middlebury cannot be over-emphasized. It is a high compliment both to the undergraduate body and to the high standing of the institution.

It is to be hoped that the manifold basis on which the award will be made will not deter anyone from making application for the award. All personal applications will be considered strictly confidential and the numerous factors entering into the final decision should be an incentive to anyone to seek to obtain one of the prizes.

The evident purpose of these fellowships is to lead Middlebury seniors to think seriously of doing graduate study either at home or abroad. Too many college students consider their education complete when they have their diploma in hand. A large number of applications would be only a fitting mark of appreciation on the part of the student body to Ex-Governor Proctor in recognition of his great generosity.

FROSH RULES OR NOT?

The last half of the college year is begun. In a few weeks elections to all honorary societies publication boards, committees, etc., for the next year will be in full swing. One of the committees to be thus appointed will be the Sophomore Rules committee. In the light of past experience it would be wise for all who have influence in campus activities to think over carefully in the next few weeks all phases of the much mooted Frosh rule problem and to try to decide exactly what the future policy of the undergraduate body shall be in the matter.

Official freshman rule enforcement as at present carried out, or attempted here at Middlebury is admittedly far from successful. Just why this is, and where the blame may rest is disputed. Nor is the exact placing of the blame important since, wherever the cause may lie, there seems to be no effectual way of remedying the matter. Attempts in that direction have been made each year with equally futile results. And there seems to be no reason to expect that a new move along those lines will meet with greater success.

In view of this situation the Campus questions whether it would not perhaps be wiser to drop the entire farce and to no longer attempt a job which is beyond the powers of the under-graduate body to carry out successfully.

This is admittedly a radical suggestion for Middlebury and will probably evoke much opposition. If it does we shall be very glad to print any bona fide communication on the subject for or against, in the hope that the matter may be thoroughly thrashed out as it should be.

Besides the serious question as to the advisability of keeping an unenforceable set of rules on paper (the results of which are too obvious to need enumeration) there are, we think, other and more fundamental grounds on which the abandonment of the Frosh rules may be urged. The preservation of hallowed tradition; disciplinary value, and the engenderment of respect for and loyalty to the college are usually urged as vital reasons for the continuance of the rules.—To say nothing of the personal satisfaction given to a certain coterie in being made overlords.

Each of those points however is open to serious question if not to complete refutation and will be discussed in a series of forthcoming edits. Suffice it to say here that as far as the first point is concerned official Frosh rules as now codified are not a time honored tradition at Middlebury, being of quite recent growth.

The Campus is conducting no campaign for first year protection and uplift, and does not wish to be so misunderstood. Unofficial hazing of one sort or another is inevitble as long as boys are boys. What the Campus seeks is not primarilly to force its own dogmatic viewpoint upon others but to bring about some really effective future policy in regard to a troubled matter.

Lloyd Chester Harris, ex-26, former editor of The Campus, Blue Baboon and Press Club, since June a member of the editorial staff of The Patchogue (L. I.) Advance is now a special writer on the staff of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.. In addition he is conducting a monthly Long Island Column in The Atlantic Fisherman and writing feature articles for this publication.

Rise of Debating Outlined
By Cambridge Students

English debating has had an eventful history. The following "outline of debating" by a member of the Cambridge debate team, appeared lately in the Harvard Crimson.

Freedom of speech, one of the most cherished rights of democracies too often has only been attained by a dire and bitter struggle. The victory of this cause, however, throughout history has been the signal for a nation to exchange the battlefield or conspiracy den for the debating hall. It is therefore no bare coincidence that organized debating first arose in England's older universities, Oxford and Cambridge, during the decade following the Napoleonic wars. The Declaration of Independence, and the French Revolution had not been forgotten, especially by the younger generation. Shelley by means of his poetry was both castigating the Tory administration and evoking the Goddess of Liberty to descend upon his harrassed land. Byron's example at Missolonghi fired the nation, while the corrupt monarchies bordering upon the Mediterranean Sea spasmodically convulsed Europe by their revolutionary movements. In response to these high hopes and great inspirations, and to assuage the bitterness of defeat and disillusionment, the students of that day took to debating as a noble recreation.

Public disputation necessarily evoked the censure of authority. The university faculty, at least in Cambridge, proceeded to confine all resolutions strictly to questions of past history, in a furtive endeavor to avoid argument upon public policy or rhetorical diatribes against public men. Thus arose the art of performing a modern drama in the midst of an historical setting. Forbidden, for instance, to discuss the vital question of the Reform Bill, involving the issue of democratic versus oligarchic government—the live problems of the day—the debaters would table an academic historical motion, as perhaps the relative merits of the governments of Athens and Sparta, under whose cloak, by carefully veiled phrases and indirect references, many a shrewd hit could be delivered by both Whig and Tory against the prominent statesmen and causes of the day. A stranger, however, would have been mystified at so much heat and excitement being aroused by a seemingly academic disputation. Thus the English debater was full of the guile, deceit and reckless humor born of illegality, now soley attributed to the Bootlegger.

These characteristics have in some measure survived, although any restrictions upon the issues to be discussed have long since been removed. Today the debate is still a lively recreation, partaken of in Cambridge on every Tuesday and in Oxford on every Thursday evening during term time. The champions saunter down from their college halls after dinner to the Union Society, the name adopted by those original post-Napoleonic debaters for their club. Here they find an audience, varying in numbers from one hundred to six hundred, ready for the fray. Those who have to open the discussion finger their notes too often hastily prepared, as they sip their last glass of port before being led into the arena by the immaculately attired President.

Thus Oxford and Cambridge men for over a hundred years have developed debating as an art which depends upon clear thinking and quick wits, sharpened by the criticism of their fellow-students. It is important to realize that neither this art nod elocution haee ever become a part of the curriculum of these two universities and that the Union Society would resent bitterly the intrusion of the faculty upon their weekly recreation. Even judges are excluded, for the procedure of these debates is based upon the time-honored practice of Parliament; the division at the end being taken on the merits of the resolution rather than on the performances of the speakers.

SOPHOMORE WOMEN DEFEAT FRESHMEN

Third Year Team Scores 30 Point Margin on Seniors.

Women's interclass basketball got well under way last night in the gymnasium when the sophomores won from the freshmen in both games with the first and second teams respectively. The juniors bowed to the seniors with a margin of 30 points.

The second sophomore team defeated the second freshman team 19 to 15. Awkward play on the part of the sophomore forwards who were just a second behind the toss-up gave the freshmen the lead in the first half. The freshmen guards had a consistent defense which at first bewildered the Sophs. Miller especially did great work and Thomas piled up the numbers with several neat foul shots. Hodges led the scoring for '29 with a total of eleven points.

The first string contest between the Sophomores and Freshmen showed the most finished play of the evening. The final whistle blew with a 42 to 17 victory for the Sophs. But the freshmen put up a good fight, and their teamwork is starting out well. Bacheldor as forward shows great promise; she is an expert dodger, and in addition has a strong throw. Lewis is an efficient guard and Guest is a good shot. The sophomores showed splendid cooperation. Marchiano scored 18 points, and Tudhope, a close second with 16. Avery and Manty showed up well on the defense, while Drake did some nice passing.

Blue Baboon Criticism.

The current issue of the Blue Baboon is singularly lacking in salient features, either good or bad. It represents low water mark, and shares in the general deadness of the winter season. Perhaps the energy of its contributors was all drained off into the task of preparing for the examinations. Whatever the cause, the product is scarcely one to which its sponsors can point with pride.

Why is it that college undergraduates, who are, when off their guard, the wittiest group in American society, stiffen into artificiality whenever they deliberately set about being funny? And why does thedr product, under such conditions, so often become either vapid or coarse?

In a group of over six hundred, there must be at least a dozen who have a sense of humor, and the ability to record a humorous incident in an entertaining way. We would respectfully suggest to the editorial board that they go out into the highways and byways and discover and bring in these lurking humorists. If it should be found that they can write English, so much they better.

As our spirit is one of incurable optimism, we have striven to derive some comfort from the editorial entitled "Lullaby for the Philistines." We fancy that we discover in it the germ of an idea. There certainly should be in college life a place for the dreams of youth, and perhaps the Chapel is as good a place as any in which to indulge in them. The music and the lights are there to furnish the proper hypnotic influence. Under the spell of a good preacher the dream may even turn into a vision.

President Moody Speaks To Vocational Group

"Manuscript Reading in a Publishing House" was the subject discussed by President Moody before the Journalistic Vocational Group in Pearsons Social Hall Wednesday evening, February 2. "The literary value of a book," said President Moody, "as well as the type it represents are important considerations to the publishers. The most varied interests are found in a publishing house, but on the whole the work is decidedly dull if one fails to meet the interesting people connected with it.

"The average person in this line of work has very little time for original writing except in making up the jackets of the different books, and even this in time becomes monotonous. The greater part of the manuscript reading has to be done after hours, leaving the worker little time for recreational purposes. The pay is meagre, sometimes by the hour, and occasionally a flat sum for the reading of a single manuscript. Financially a readr is not a success; even the best receive low salaries in comparison to the hours of hard work which are required.

"There are few openings for women, and of this number the opportunity for advancement is even more limited. The most promising future lies in the secretarial and advertising field of publishing. A publisher is instinctively a gambler and in this respect men have higher qualifications than women. The three questions a publisher always asks himself are: Will this book sell well? Is it worth of this house? Has it the requisite literary finish."

NEWS LETTER MAKES SECOND APPEARANCE

Alumni Publication Plans To Have Four Numbers Per Year.

The Middlebury College News Letter, official publication of the Alumni and Alumnae Associations of the college has made its second appearance in print with the January number. The publication after a period of uncertainty as to financial backing has at last secured the support of the college trustees for a period of three years. It is planned to henceforth publish the News Letter regularly four times a year.

The editors for the January issue were Dean Edgar J. Wiley, Arthur W. Peach, and Alvin R. Metcalfe. The resultant booklet is a sixteen page number profusely illustrated and filled with news of all sorts relative to the current and past history of the college which is of a nature to interest the graduates.

The editorial page states that in designing the News Letter no other Alumni magazine was imitated because of the desire that the result should be distinctly Middlebury's. While editorially the policy of the new magazine is to "move as far away as possible from 'journalese', to record if possible the more permanent elements of college and alumni interests, and at the same time keep the human touch."

Among the outstanding features of this issue are "Campus Pros and Cons", a column devoted to short summaries of important current campus news; "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" and "Faculty Round Table Discussions", two pages edited respectively by Professor Emeritus Charles Baker Wright and Dr. William Sargent Burrage; an Interview with "Billy" Farrell; an article by Coach Arthur M. Brown on "The 1926 Football Season"; an account of the trip of Dr. and Mrs. Vernon C. Harrington to California last year, together with extensive personal Alumni Notes. Besides these major articles there are also contained reports of Alumni meetings, of annual reunions and many other smaller items. The illustrations are of such a nature as to be of particular interest to the Alumni and are uniformely clear cut.

The News Letter hopes as soon as possible to become self supporting. DEAN WILEY SPEAKS TO KAPPA PHI KAPPA

Speaking on the subject of "Teaching as a Profession", Dean E. J. Wiley gave an instructive talk to the members of the Kappa Phi Kappa fraternity Wednesday evening in the Education Library.

He outlined the teaching profession as the one presenting the best possibilities to the college graduate. The advantages and disadvantages of the profession were also innumerated and in closing he briefly stated the qualifications of the ideal teacher.

ALUMNI NOTES

Ex-1925—Max M. Savitt, of No. 104 Westbourne Parkway, Hartford, Conn. is one of 33 men who passed the Connecticut State bar examination last December. About one-fourth of those who took the examination passed. Savitt received his LL.B. from Cornell University last June. He intends to practice in Hartford.

1926—James S. Jackson, who has been on the editorial department of the Hartford Courant, since graduation, has been assigned to the State Capitol, where he will report the activities of the Connecticut Senate.

NILES '29, ELECTED ASSISTANT MANAGER

At a meeting of the Athletic Council on Wednesday afternoon, January 19, Chauncey A. Niles '28 of Utica, N. Y., was officially declared elected to the position of assistant manager Football for the coming season. He was one of four candidates trying for the position.

In his freshman year Mr. Niles was a tryout for the business staff of the Blue Baboon and was on the freshman football squad. He is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity.

Cane Tradition Carried By Thomas to Rutgers

That President John M. Thomas of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., formerly the President of Middlebury College has carried to the New Jersey institute one of Middlebury's most cherished traditions is the news conveyed in the following extract from the Boston Herald of January 25:

Middlebury, Vt., Jan. 25.—Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., and Middlebury College now share a tradition in common with Pres. John M. Thomas' instituting at Rutgers the carrying of Gamaliel Painter's cane after a football victory over Lafayette. While he was head at Middlebury, President Thomas for several years marched at the head of the undergraduates snake dance, following gridiron victories over their old rival, the University of Vermont. And following that tradition he inaugurated, he carried Gamaliel Painter's cane, a century-old relic of one of Middlebury's founders.

The cane is kept in close concealment until Vermont has been defeated, and then, for a week or more, the president of the college carries it with him about the campus. Pres. Thomas of Rutgers has had a duplicate of the cane made, to be displayed by him and succeeding presidents of the university following victories over Lafayette.

Letter Home From Senior, Class 1812

A letter written in April, 1812, by Seth Shaler Arnold a member of the Senior class of Middlebury in that year to his sister Ester Arnold of Westminster, Vt., has recently come into the possession of President Paul D. Moody and is printed in full below as furnishing an interesting contrast to the usual under-graduate home letters of today:

Middlebury, Vt.,
April 6, 1812.

Dear Sister:

I intrude on my study hours, to write you, rather than delay writing ary longer. I do not write to Ambrose, because I do not know that he is at home. I write to you in preference to my father, because I am fully impressed, that my kind, forgiving parents would overlook it, even if it were a fault in me. But I am persuaded, that my parents will as gladly hear from an unworthy son; through the medium of their daughter, as if directed particularly to them. Yes; and I think more gladly; because they have a strong desire for the happiness and improvement of their children, and my father seldom writes himself, he would wish that you might have pleasure in receiving a letter, and cheerfully improve your mind and writing by returning an answer.

When I first came to Middlebury my moments rolled heavily along, till the beginning of the term. Then I had so much to do, that time flew apace, till the exhibition was past and gone. Since that time I have been busily employed; but I begin to feel poor; and my spirits languish, I thought when I came from home, that I would take an academy and so be enabled to afford some assistance to my father, to lighten his burden in declining years.—That I might make some return of gratitude for the unwearied care of infancy, and the support of my College life. But alas! my hopes are blasted.

I made application to the President for permission to teach an academy; but he was unwilling that I should be absent. He told me, I should lose the best time in College for improvement in composition, of which I was very sensible. Yet if I could have engaged the school at Walpole I should have taken a dimmission and returned again before commencement for admission to the same standing.

But now I know of no school or academy which I could engage. I am left in indigent circumstances. I am drained of money and a flood of expenses before me. I must leave College where I am! Twelve weeks more to study. But if I do I can not pay up to the present day. Must I be in debt? Unwelcome thought.—Can I be trusted?—When and how shall I pay?—Can I ask my father for a cent?—Already has he bestowed on me the earnings of a moistened brow, under the scorching of a summer's sun.—How then, can I ask him to borrow for me, a hundred and thirty-one dollars, even if I pay it myself?—I am now a debtor for my former support, and poorly prepared to return a reward for paternal kindness.—O! Let not my heart be callous to parental affection.

May Jesus our Saviour, with blessings descending,
Grant peace, love and plenty, with smiles ever blending.

I have time only to inform you that Mrs. Aikens is dead. She was Mrs. Spencer's daughter.

Remember my affectionate regards to all the family and enquiring friends.

Yours, SETH ARNOLD.

Miss Esther Arnold.

Clothes, $28.50; Tuition, $30.00; Board, $48,00; Washing, $2.86; Wood and Candles, $2.50; The Expences of exhibition and other Commencement charges, $20.00; Total, $131.86. The least total expences.

Other expences continually occur—horse keeping is very high. You all know that I am no hand to trade horses.

Ex-1924—D. Haydn Parry, has recently been appointed bailiff of the Court of Common Pleas, in Cleveland, O.

DUTTON FELLOWSHIP APPLICATIONS DUE

March 1 the Latest Date at Which One May Apply For Award.

Final announcement is now made concerning applications for the Dutton Fellowships which were established this fall by Hon. Redfield Proctor of Proctor, Vermont. Originally the awarding of these fellowships was to be made at Commencement time, but in order that applicants may not be kept in uncertainty as to future plans the date for final decision has been advanced to a much earlier period.

These fellowships as previously announced will be awarded to one man and one woman from the class of 1927 for advanced work in their chosen fields. The recipients will receive the sum of one thousand dollars each if the year's work is to be persued at some institution in the United States; fifteen hundred dollars if at some foreign University. The basis of the award is similar in character to that of the Rhodes scholarships: scholastic and literary ability, character, leadership, and physical vigor all being considered; with the greatest emphasis on intellectual ability and high character.

In order that the award may be made as early as possible in the spring the period for application is now open and will close definitely on the first of March. Application blanks may be secured from the office of the Dean of Men, of the Dean of Women, or from Professor Freeman at the Chateau. The blanks must be returned to Professor Freeman before March 1. No applications will be considered after that date.

INDIAN STORIES BY "LUCKY BONES" MAN

"Tigers" and "A Frontier Duel" both by Mr. James E. Scott; the one a graphic account of a jungle kill and the other of a primitive duel to the death came to the attention of the Campus a few weeks ago. The two articles are reprinted in full below both because of their vividness and because Mr. Scott the author is the well known big game hunter in India who shot the black panther from which Middlebury "Lucky Bones" were obtained. The stories came to the paper by way of Mr. Joseph A. Peck '98 and Mr. G. M. Hossack of the Standard Oil Co. who presented the "Lucky Bones" to the college.

A Frontier Duel.

On the far North Eastern frontier of India, overlooking the Diku river that separates British territory from the no-man's land of the Chang headhunters, stands the bungalow of the Assistant Political Officer of the Naga Hills. Here, one February afternoon, I watched a reproduction from gladiatorial Rome.

For months there had been bad blood between Longsa and Yatchemi, two of the stockaded villages across the frontier, and heads had been taken by both sides. On this particular day, some forty fighting "bucks" of each village, armed with their long throwing spears and mrderous "daos"—like heavy butchers' knives—met in the bare rice-fields bordering the river, and fought a pitched battle. So long as the combatants kept their own side of the border, I had no authority to interfere, and so sat watching the tide set grimly against the Longsa men, till the survivors broke and fled. Two, however, still fought on, though at least seven Yatchemi warriors held back from the pursuit to face them. The heavy ivory armlets and necklace of boars' tushes showed one of the two to be a chief.

Pressed hard in front, and in danger of being surrounded, the Longsa men backed to the river edge, and then in desperation turned to make the shelter of British territory. The chief gained the opposite bank, but his companion slipped in the swift rocky stream, fell, and was given no chance to rise. As I started towards them, a single Yatchemi brave dashed through the river and renewed the fight, his comrades watching, silent and intent, from the farther side. Both duellists had lost their spears; both carried daos, and the Longsa chief bore a shield of hardened bison-hide. The Yatchemi man pressed the attack fiercely, raining vicious strokes that hewed pieces from the shield. The chief gave ground, parrying with consummate skill, and waiting his chance to counter. This came when I was within fifty yards.

The attacker was now breathing hard; his strokes grew weaker, and suddenly he over-reached and stumbled, exposing his whole body. In a flash the Longsa dao caught him on the point of the shoulder with a terrific cross slash, sheering through flesh and muscle and bone to the waist-line on the opposite side, and cutting him literally in halves.

I took but one transgressor against the Pax Brittanica, and he bore himself like a triumphant general.

Tiger.

The fierce hot stillness of an Indian jungle at noon. A little platform, four feet square, in a solitary tree that fronts a tiny clearing and commands the spot where two game trails emerge from tangled undergrowth. Behind that wall of matted creeper and tall grass, somewhere, probably, beside the shaded watercourse, and close to the remains of his victim, lies the tiger..

The beaters have formed a half-moon round the covert, and the crash of drums and tom-toms mingle with their shouts to announce the hunt is afoot. The line works steadily forward. A hyena trots out in front, pauses a moment listening, and passes on. Presently from the left, where the nulla lies, comes a shrill trumpet from our single elephant, followed by redoubled shouting. Jung Bahadur is speaking to a fresh scent. A catspaw of wind rustles the dry leaves and starts our hearts thumping; then dies away. Another ten minutes; some parrots chatter excitedly; a stick cracks, and faint, stealthy, but unmistakable, comes the tread of some heavy animal. A few seconds make it certain he is moving towards us, and our eyes are rivetted on a tiny opening through the bushes which he must cross. Then the footfalls cease, while the pandemonium behind intensifies, until it seems as if nothing could hear it and remain still.

Just as we grow convinced the tiger has somehow sneaked past us, the steps take up again, and now quicker, heavier, more menacing. Across the opening has passed a yellow shadow, hardly visualised before it is gone. The rifle goes up and we watch agonisedly the quivering of our foresight. A moment later we realize we are staring at the tiger's head, half hidden by grass, as he pauses distrustfully on the edge of the clearing. The rifle swings just a fraction to cover him, and the sights steady as by magic. For endless aeons he stands there listening, then, without sound and apparently without motion, he is out in the sunlight. As he strides forward we sight for the play of the shoulder, and press steadily. The roar of the .470 is followed by a confused vision of upflung body, gleaming teeth, and huge paws that flail the air and churn up leaves and turf. There is a deep groan, a convulsive heave and shudder, and a slow rigid stretching as the fierce life goes out of him. The slayer has made his last kill.

C. S. JONES GIVES VOCATIONAL TALK

Aviator Discusses Present and Future of Plane Industry.

Giving the first vocational lecture of the year Charles S. (Casey) Jones, '15, authority on aviation and the flying industry, spoke in Mead Chapel Friday morning on "Future Transportation in the Aeroplone Industry." Mr. Jones developed his subject from the standpoint of four main branches of Aviation. In part he spoke as follows:

"The manufacturing of planes is very similar to automobile manufacture in that the planes are inductively constructed, each skilled machinist doing one definite piece of work in the evolution of the ship. Such work requires the mechanically ambitious type of man and is perhaps less attractive for the college trained individual.

"The engineering branch of aviation is doubtless the great field for the college man. The art of aeroplane engineering has hardly begun, and the college man with his trained mind and spirit will be the means of untold advancement in this art.

"The operating branch of aviation is the romantic branch of the profession", said Mr. Jones. "The air mail sytsem, which is still in its infancy, is one of the greatest pioneering advancements the land has ever known.

"There is a network of mail lines already in use, with an unique beacon system by means of which planes can be guided across the whole continent. In the two years of transcontinental mail service there has been but one serious loss which shows that this utility is one of great significance. Passenger lines in this country will come three of four years in the future.

"Up to the present time, the government has been the chief purchaser of planes but as the private plans becomes more popular, the selling branch will become an important part of the industry. The middle west will be the chief center of the selling branch, since the land there is level, distances great, and the transportation of poor type.

"Flying schools such as the Army School at Brooks Field, Texas, where young men can take intensive courses in the art of flying are the best places for the college graduate to start his career. In conclusion Mr. Jones described the numberless phases of the flying profession that the company with which he is connected is continually meeting, such as mapping, surveying, and many types of photographic work."

Rev. Alexander G. Purdy, of Hartford Theological Seminary, spoke at Vespers Sunday on the search for a new world of spirit. His text was a verse from Paul: "Wherefore if any man is in Christ, he is a new creature. The old things are passed away; behold, they are become new."

Said Rev. Purdy, "Life holds disappointments, durdgery, cheerlessness, for us all. We want escape and refuge in a more enjoyable life. That explans the hold of the theatre upon us; it explains the increasing observance of holidays. We want and need to escape from life as it is day by day.

"Religion can give us this escape. If Christ has only a small place in our lives, it is because we are not convinced that He can give us what we want. I believe we demand a new world transcending the old, a new Jerusalem coming down out of heaven. It is not incredible to find such a world. We are all continually maving into new worlds of experience; we know what it is to experience emotions that lead us into new worlds. Ocassionally we meet people who have found a world of spirit from which nothing can separate them; people who live in a joy that we know nothing about.

"How may we find such a world and dwell therein? It is worth while to ask ourselves what steps we may take toward the discovery of this world. It may be found through new appreciations. However it comes, it is a matter of getting at the meaning of life, yet, driven continually from fact to fact, how much time do we have to grope for the meaning of life? We may discover the new world by a particular kind of appreciation, by searching for a particular kind of faith. Paul was so driven to seek for laws that he found no time to ask himself questions. But Jesus finally lifted his eyes to God, and through Him, Paul found love. He saw a new world, with God the loving Father, and he threw his energy into an eager and glad cooperation. We are absorbed in contemplating the laws of God, such as the laws of science. The danger lies in our not being able to lift our eyes from the minute to the majestic.

"The least we can do in our search for a new world is to seek for the abiding value of life, to brood upon it and try to appreciate it. But the new world is not merely a matter of appreciation. There is experience, the real test of it all. We lift our eyes to find a world that has made many lives great. Christianity is a dream,—yes, but a persistent and recurrent dream. All of us are bound by vows which we are failing to keep. Yet the dream haunts us and the vision persists. Our great search is for a new world of the spirit which lies beyond the frontiers of the life of every man."

STUDENT ATHEISM NOT INCREASING

That the undergraduate far from being more atheistic or insensible to religion today than he was 25 years ago, has now a clearer perception of the relation of religion to life and social service, is of the most striking conclusion to be drawn from the nationwide survey of compulsory chapel, conducted by the National Student Federation of America. The investigation, the result of which embraced every state but two in the country, included the sending of questionnaires to the college presidents, and the undergraduate editors of the nation, as well as to a representative group of ministers who appear frequently before college assemblies of various types. Following is the report issued by H. C. Rose, Princeton 1928, chairman of the Federation Committee on Compulsory Chapel.

"The investigation on the subject of compulsory chapel carried on by the National Student Federation of America, has been conducted throughout in an entirely impartial spirit, which has aimed rather to discover the facts of the situation than to foster a revolt of youth or to assume an ultra-conservative stand.

"The questionnaires issued to the college presidents contained the following three questions: 'Do you favor compulsory chapel—Sunday, week-day or both?' 'What do you deem to be the chief benefits of compulsory chapel for your undergraduates?' 'What do you believe to be the greatest change in the religious interests of the present students as compared with those of 1900?' Approximately 315 replies were received with the following results from the 'for and against' poll contemplated in the first question: For compulsory Sunday chapel, 136; against, 176; for compulsory weekday chapel, 220; against, 90.

"The responses to the third query were highly enlightening in view of the fundamentalist-modernist controversy, and the widespread charge that college students are becoming immoral and atheistic. A plurality of the replies declared that the basis of college religion had shifted from individualism and devotion to social service. Sixty-two felt that the attitude of the students was more questioning and independent than ever before, that they express their thoughts more freely and had less patience with doctrine or the fine points of dogma. The bulk of the remainder declared in the ratio of three to one either that no change was apparent, or else that there was a tendency for the better among undergraduates.

"The questionnaire to the students was less definite than that to the presidents, and accordingly elicited a wide variety of reasons for and against the principle of compulsion. The value of assembly for the sake of college unity was clearly appreciated, as well as the practical difficulty of such assembly in several instances. One editor writes ' . . . no building on the campus is large enough to seat the entire student body. The stadium is rather exposed.' Others felt strongly that the inattention and disrespect which they considered concomitants of compulsory chapel tended to destroy the religious faith of the average undergraduate. The theory was also expressed that chapel still remains the best way to begin the day.

"It is obvious that these years have witnessed in the world at large a decreasing interest in creeds, but I am inclined to think that there has been, and particularly in these last years, an increasing interest in the fundamental religious problems . . . in that increasing interest the undergraduates of our college participate. This shows itself in an eagerness to discuss the underlying problems of religious faiths and developments, and also in the responsibilities of services which the applications of religious conviction usually entail.". Numerous testimonials are available to the effect that the students have at present less regard than formerly for creed and dogma.

"Thirty-two replies expressed the conviction that to establish a system of voluntary chapel attendance and compulsory class attendance is to exalt intellectual life above spiritual life, which is unthinkable in a college which professes to be chirstian. In this connection there were several replies which objected to the use of the word 'compulsion' in regard to chapel, since other exercises were compulsory without being branded with especial stigma. Students enter a Christian college, it was declared, with a knowledge that it is founded on Christianity, and owes an official acknowledgement of the fact. If they object, the proper course is to betake themselves elsewhere without agitating the question.

"A contradiction is apparent between the contention of several ministers, who were convinced that 'college chapel should not be a handmaid for ulterior purposes! and that of a considerable element among the presidents, who deemed chapel an excellent place for a general rallying ground for every college function. President John Hoffman of Ohio Wesleyan insisted that 'at Wesleyan we demolish the old conception that religion and athletics cannot be presented in the same service without degrading religion:' by a much larger percentage of the presidents, it was felt, however, that college untiy is one of the principal benefits accruing from a religious assembly. Dean Gildersleeve of Barnard, although holding chapel is impracticable under the circumstances of the case, is of the opinion that there would be a great advantage in getting all of the students together.

"Only twenty-nine replies expressed the thought that there was a change for the worse in the religious interests of the students, including several which spoke of the confusion and unrest in which the modern student seemed to find himself. Two declared the conviction that 'the undergraduate is drifting into Bolshevism.' Dean Waugh of the University of Southern California, states 'Where there is real religious interest, it is not different from that in 1900. But institutions these days, and parents still more, are doing less to cultivate religious interest. This accounts for the change.' "

Middlebury Entered In Dartmouth Meet

To compete in the annual intercollegiate winter sports carnival the Middlebury Winter Sports team left today for Hanover, New Hampshire. The other colleges represented in the three-day meet are Dartmouth, New Hampshire, Norwich, Williams, and McGill.

With last year's State championship as a boon, the team is expected to make a good showing, although it is handicapped by a lack of practise inasmuch as there has been little snow here.

The entrees for Middlebury men are as follows: Henry Weston '29 (Captain) in the ski jump and cross country ski race; Ronald P. Burrows '29 in speed skating; William Donald '28 in the cross country snowshoe race; and Henry Hunt '29 in ski jump and mile ski race.

At the weekly meeting of the Y. W. C. A. on Tuesday evening, Dr. Allen Kline lectured on the much discussed problem of the relations between China and England.

He gave a detailed description of the beginnings of the Chinese Empire and the conditions of the country at the time. After briefly summarizing the history of the intervening years, he told of the great turrmoil which has upset China during the last twenty-five years.

"China is divided into two factions, and it is probable that the head of each of these is in foreign pay—the north in that of Japan, and the south, of Russia. At present the difficulty lies in the fact that China is in rebellion against the concessions and power which foreign countries have over her territory. England together with the U. S. has agreed to give up or adjust her concessions, but the country is in such a state of uncertainty that the outcome is doubtful."

ALPHA SIGS LEAD IN SAGE CUP RACE

Neutrals Win From Chi Psi's; Alpha Sigs and Sig Eps Take Games.

After two weeks of inactivity during mid-years the interfraternity league swung into action again last Wednesday when the Neutrals won their second game after a hard-fought battle with Chi Psi, winning out in the final period, 14-6. The winners were having an off-night and showed nothing of the form that carried them to a championship last year. Cort and March showed up the best for the victors while Hinman starred for the losers.

Thursday afternoon the league-leading Alpha Sigs won a decisive victory over the Dekes, 38-8. The losers were overwhelmed from the first, being on the short end of a 14-4 score at the half. In the last two periods Johnson and Casey ran wild, scoring at will to run up a lop-sided win.

Sigma Phi Epsilon won its second game in three starts Friday evening when Delta Sigma was buried under a 30-5 score. Greatly strengthened by the acquisition of Jones and Davis from the varsity squad, the Sig Eps showed potential power at times but for the most part the playing of both teams was extremely poor. The score at half time was 22-0. Jones was high point man of the game.

H. B. BERGMAN TO HEAD PRESS CLUB

The position of the editorship of the Press Club left vacant by the resignation of Charles F. Malam '28 was taken over the first of this week by Harold Bergman '30 of Burlington.

Bergman has had considerable experience on various newspapers as reporter, feature writer and desk man. He is at present a reporter on the staff of the CAMPUS and a try-out for the Saxonian and Blue Baboon.

Under the direction of Professor Wilfred E. Davison the new editor will reorganize the club with a view to making it more serviceable to both the institution and the newspapers with which it cooperates.

It is through the medium of the Press Club that college activities receive publicity in newspapers throughout the country. The work is done wholly by students and comprises a regular college activity. Students in both the men's and women's college who are interested in newspaper practice are asked to leave their names and addresses with Mr. Bergman at either 2 North Starr hall or the Press Club office on the top floor of Old Chapel.

The Press Club is especially interested in handling personal news of members of the faculty, students and alumni and any signed items left at the press office or with the editor will receive attention. Officers of the college as well as of clubs, classes, fraternities and sororities are requested to keep the Press Club informed of their activities.

Student Government Ass'n Meets.

At a meeting of the Student Government Association held in Mead Chapel last Wednesday, Eleanor Manley, President, reminded the student body of several of the rules which have a distinct tendency toward being overlooked. Miss Manley stated that the committee on the revision of the Constitution was making much progress and that a meeting would soon be called with the purpose of voting on the revisions. A copy of these regulations is to be placed in each of the girls' dormitories.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Professor and Mrs. Harry M. Clark wish to announce the birth of a daughter, Jean, on January 28.

1927-1928 FOOTBALL SCHEDULE RELEASED

Seven games, with possibilities of an eighth, comprise Middlebury's football schedule for the season of 1927-28, according to the program issued by Coach Brown of the athletic department. The season opens at Williamstown when the Panther again faces Williams College, on Oct. 1.

Mass. Aggies come to Middlebury the following week to open the local football season, and then Tufts at Medford will supply competition for Capt. Furbush's eleven. The season ends on Nov. 19 with the Providence game at Providence.

Following is the entire schedule:

Oct. 1, Williams at Wiliamstown.
Oct. 8, M. A. C. at Middlebury.
Oct. 15, Tufts at Medford.
Oct. 22, pending.
Oct. 29, Hamilton at Clinton, N. Y.
Nov. 5, Norwich at Middlebury.
Nov. 12, Vermont at Burlington.
Nov. 19, Providence at Providence.

For such a schedule, Middlebury will have a team of veterans to take the field with the first contest. Although six of the 17 letter-men this year are seniors, including ex-captain Wiley, there remains a complete line-up, with members of this fall's squad to make up a strong string of subs. Material is expected to be taken from the class of 1930, too, making prospects of a good season next year.

Plans For Baseball Season Made.

First movements toward the 1927 varsity baseball season were started by Coach Marshall M. Klevenow yesterday with the calling together of candidates for the squad. Thirty-four men reported. Practice will probably commence toward the latter part of February.

Middlebury has lost only two of last year's letter men by graduation, Joseph C. Novotny and R. L. Rice. Indications, according to Coach Klevenow, point to the development of some very fair battery material among the Freshmen class, in which department the team stands in greatest need of restrengthening.

Davison To Speak at Y. M. C. A.

"Christianity in Literature" is the subject to be discussed by Professor Wilfred E. Davison tomorrow evening at the weekly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. in Hepburn Hall, at seven o'clock.

All students who are interested in this outstanding phase of literature are invited to attend the meeting.

Large Number Attend Frosh Frolic.

At the annual Frolic of the Freshman Class which took place in McCullough Gymnasium last Saturday evening, a large number of couples made merry to music furnished by Black Panther Serenaders.

The committee composed of William Hawley, Chester Bostwick, Jason Daniels, Robert Hathaway, and Misses Barbara Crouch, Elizabeth Parker, Helen Simpson, and Caro Wyman planned the Frolic. Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Burrage, Mr. John Bowker, Professor and Mrs. J. S. Kingsley, Miss Eleanor Ross and Mrs. Maude O. Mason acted as chaperones.

Cast For "A Doll's House."

The cast of characters in Ipsen's "A Doll's House" which is to be presented here February 25, is announced as follows: Torvald Helmer, Prof. W. S. Burrage; Nora Helmer, Mrs. L. J. Hathaway; Dr. Rank, Prof. J. D. Bowker; Nils Krogstad, B. S. Stewart; Mrs. Linden, Mrs. D. L. Robinson; Anna and Ellen, servants, Miss Lucille Baker and Miss Elizabeth Hack.

PANTHER ICE TEAM DEFEATS MASS. AGGIES

Undefeated Sextet Makes First Appearance on Home Rink.

M. A. C. CONQUERED BY 3 TO 0 SCORE

With a flashing offense that kept the visitors on the defense for the greater part of the game, Middlebury's hockey sextet conquered the powerful M. A. C. ice team Friday afternoon by a 3 to 0 score. It was the Panther's first appearance on the local rink, after a season of three victories in three games played.

The Hub-staters brought to the contest a combination of skaters who were a fit opponent for Middlebury. Within the first three minutes of play, the puck had been swept to Middlebury's goal, and "Joe" Finnegan was kept on the alert, to ward off attempts at points. But Capt. Simmons' wing-men and defense settled down to steadier playing, and at the end of another two minutes had repulsed the attack, captured the puck and assumed the offensive which was held for practically the rest of the game.

"Hal" Whittemore was credited with the first goal, after a little over 12 minutes of play. He had broken through the M. A. C. defense and was trying for a goal when Kelley joined him in the scrimmage. "Hal" lifted the puck; it disappeared. Only after a search had been instituted by Referee Barrie was it found reposing in goalee Galanie's shin-pad—and he had carried it inside the goal.

"Red" Hill, by a pretty piece of skating that culminated in a try for point, scored the second goal, in the second period. A rapid exchange of thrusts had found the puck in Middlebury's possession. "Red" dashed into the scrimmage in the vicinity of the nets, and eluding the Massachusetts' defense, shot his point.

The third goal was made in the third period, when a pretty pass, Kelley to Gruggel, found the latter uncovered and in position for a shot. "Barney" skated by the goal and slipped the puck past Galanie. M. A. C. made desperate attempts to threaten the Panther, but the play seldom advanced beyond mid-ice, and for the most part centered within striking distance of the visitors' goal.

A good crowd of undergrads saw the victory in which Middlebury's conquering sextet demonstrated the power that has vanquished Hamilton College, Providence, and the University of Vermont. With practically the same line-up as that of last year, the team is showing definite promise of piling up a record that will be even better than that of its former season.

Summary:

Middlebury (3)	M. A. C. (0
Kelley, lw	lw, Forrest
Hill, rw	rw, Swan
Whittemore, c	c, Frese
Bossert, ld	ld, Abrahamson

lifetime and contains many valuable first editions of American authors.

He was a great admirer of Thoreau; and the Thoreau section of the library is very complete, comprising over 750 books, pamphlets, manuscripts and personal possessions of this writer. Through such a library the college will be enabled to furnish advanced students of American literature abundant material for first hand investigation and research.

The Egbert Starr library, to which the two wings are to be added, was dedicated in 1900. It was erected with funds bequeathed by Egbert Starr and cost $50,000. To this was added $5,000 for interior decoration and $5,000 for the purchase of books.

In 1916 Dr. M. Allen Starr, son of the donor, through whose gift the present proposed additions are made possible, contributed $5,000 for further equipment. The library at present contains about 50,000 volumes.

"Speaking of fine tobaccos —Have a Camel!"

A NICETY of blending, a friendly cordiality of flavor, an inherent goodness that thrills from the first puff to the last — that's Camels. The warmth of golden sunlight on autumn fields gleams in their smoke. Camels are an expression of all that is the finest.

Camel quality and Camel excellence are recognized wherever smokers gather. The best of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos are blended in this famous cigarette. For this reason Camels have consistent goodness. For this reason they never tire the taste, no matter how liberally you smoke them; never leave a cigaretty after-taste.

And wherever experienced smokers gather, wherever the conversation turns to tobacco — to the world's best — someone is sure to say: "Speaking of fine tobaccos . . . Have a Camel!"
